07 — Bollinger bands (dual band & father–son)

Last 3×3 indicator family: volatility + trend, still on two/three clocks.

Default picture

Middle band = 20-period average. Outer bands = typical 2 standard deviations. Price walking the upper band = strong uptrend (not an automatic short). Price hugging the lower band = strong downtrend.

Squeeze (bands narrow) = energy coiling. Expansion = the move.

Dual band / volatility divergence (3×3 middle episodes)

He pairs two band views (settings or timeframes) so volatility disagrees with a sleepy average — a warning that range is about to change. In this lab, until we add a second band overlay on the pack, you mark by eye:

- Are bands narrow then ripping?
- Is the walk along one band intact or failing (close back inside, then opposite band)?

If the printed pack has no extra BB overlay yet, use wicks vs a mental 20-bar middle and wait for the next pack version. Do not fake precise %B numbers.

Father–son (episode 11 in the public numbering)

- Father = higher TF (often weekly): direction
- Son = lower TF (often daily): entry
- Golden ratio talk: daily vs weekly ~1:5; weekly vs monthly ~1:4; keep father/son 4–6× apart

Example: weekly riding upper band (father up). Daily tags mid or lower band / support (son dip). That is a buy-the-dip in father's trend, same spirit as RSI GFS, different tool.

Sell mirror: father on lower band walk; son pops to mid/upper into resistance.

Combine with RSI (3×3 finale energy)

Best pages in your pack:

- Father trend and weekly RSI range agree
- Son dip and daily RSI ~40 (long) or ~60 (short)
- Candle + S/R confirm

If BB says up and RSI weekly is a bearish box, skip. Alignment is the product.

Practice on the chart pack

Without a BB overlay: still write father trend (week: rising / falling / box) and son position (high / mid / low of recent range). When overlays exist: mark upper-walk / lower-walk / squeeze.

Then one combined line: “GFS? BB father-son? both? neither?”
